A MESSAGE FROM THE PRINCIPAL

BEYOND SUCCESS -The Human Being We Are Raising

There is a question that quietly follows every child through the corridors of school and eventually, through the corridors of life:

"What will you become?"

We hope when we make the request. We expect when we make the request. And at other times we ask it with anxiety.

Shall you be a doctor, an engineer, a scientist, an entrepreneur, or an artist? Shall you go to the best university? Shall you come first? Shall you achieve success?

At some point during the process, even if we didn't intend to, we have started to regard success as the aim of education.

But as I look at the world our children are growing into, I find myself asking a different question:

Before we consider what our children will turn out to be, shouldn't we first consider who they will become?

The world is undergoing changes at an amazing speed. A child nowadays is able to put a question to a machine and get an answer in just a few seconds. Artificial intelligence can write, carry out calculations, translate, analyse, compose and create. Knowledge, which used to be hard to find, is now all around us.

It follows that the biggest challenge now facing the field of education is not merely to fill the minds of young people with knowledge, but to teach them what to do with it and at the same time to show them who they should be when doing so.

Success is important, but it by no means suffices.

We must celebrate achievement.

We celebrate the child who works hard and achieves success, the athlete who reaches the end of the race, the musician who becomes proficient at a difficult section, the scholar who attains the highly desired mark, and the young person who turns their dream into reality.

Yet there are victories which make no sound.

A child's victory consisting in failing and then deciding to start once more.

The quiet courage shown by someone who says, "I was wrong."

A student showing kindness by noticing a child who is alone and sitting by the edge of the playground.

The quality of acting in the right way even when no one is looking.

Dr. Bhubaneswari Rao
(Principal)

The ability to give up without feeling bitter.

The ability to win in such a way that no one else feels inferior.

The bravery in standing by oneself when the crowd is wrong.

Medals are seldom awarded for such achievements, they might never be recorded on a report card, and yet they are frequently the ones that have a lasting impact on a person's life.

The future will put a person's character on the same level as their competence.

The future that our children are heading towards has not yet been mapped out.

The professions they are going to take up have not yet been created. The technologies they are going to make use of have not even been imagined. They will live in a world full of remarkable possibilities, but also one characterized by distraction, uncertainty, misinformation, and hard decisions.

In that kind of world, having intelligence on its own might not be sufficient.

They will have to remain curious if they are to keep asking questions.

Thinking critically in order to tell the difference between wisdom and noise.

Resilience appears when life doesn't proceed as planned.

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRINCIPAL

Seeing things from the perspective of another person empathically.

To be truthful even when the truth is inconvenient.

Discipline means doing what needs to be done, even when you do not feel like it.

Above all else, they will need a sense of purpose, an inner compass which will show them not only how far they can go but also where they ought to go.

That is when a school turns into more than just a school.

A school involves not just a set of classrooms, laboratories, books and examinations.

It is just a small preview of what life will be like.

A child learns not only numbers but also precision, patience and perseverance in a mathematics classroom.

A child on the sports field comes to realize that winning is wonderful, but also that losing has its own lesson to teach.

A child, being hesitant, comes across a voice on stage.

Curiosity is allowed to explore in a laboratory.

A young mind can learn to sit quietly with an idea in a library.

It is possibly in meditation that a restless mind comes across the rare experience of stillness.

What is also being developed in the ordinary interactions that take place between teachers and children, between friends, and between older people and younger ones is character.

Education involves more than just what we teach children.

It is also exactly what they experience, notice and take in when they are with us.

This might be the true significance of our E^3 journey.

To empower the mind, so that children become curious enough to question, courageous enough to think independently, and wise enough to make responsible choices.

To touch the heart—teaching people to care, to listen, to work together, to include one another and to contribute.

And aim to excel—not only when compared to another child but when compared to the child they had been the day before.

True excellence is not about being superior to others.

One should be able to transcend the limits that apply to oneself without at the same time losing one's humanity.

In my opinion, one of the most beautiful duties ever given to a school is this.

We are not merely preparing children for exams.

We are preparing them to face disappointments with no answer keys, to make decisions without multiple-choice options, to endure relationships that call for patience, to cope with failures that require resilience, and to achieve success with humility.

We are having them prepared for the examination of life.

Maybe in years to come our children are not going to remember all the chapters they studied, all the examinations they took or all the prizes they won.

However, they could recall the teacher who had faith in them even though they did not have faith in themselves.

The friend standing by them.

The room in which they came across something that they loved.

When they had gained the courage to make another attempt.

The school which made them feel that they belonged.

Most important of all, the kind of person they became as they grew up under our care.

So perhaps the ultimate question we should ask of education is not:

How successful are our children?

but—

What sort of human beings are we aiding them to become?

Success may lead a person to a position.

Knowledge can give someone power.

Achievement can lead to recognition for a person.

A person gains direction through their character.

In the end, our greatest achievement as educators might well be the number of successful children we send into the world.

It will be the total number of human beings who are good, courageous, compassionate, curious and have a purpose that we assist in sending into it.

We are not simply preparing children to succeed in the world.

We are training them so that they may make the world better.

With warm regards,

Principal

The Transition Phase of Education We are Heading With

Education is never static. It grows and changes with society, and Nepal's educational journey is no exception. Since the restoration of democracy, our education system has gone through many important changes. These changes are natural and necessary for a developing society.

Today, however, we are at a stage where all those involved in education need to think about what more can be done to make education meaningful, respectful and beneficial for everyone.

One positive change we see today is the growing awareness among students and parents about their rights and the legal protections available to them. This awareness is important and deserves appreciation. At the same time, while understanding our rights, we should also think about our responsibilities towards others.

For example, when a teacher is teaching in a classroom and a few students are disturbing the class, the teacher may ask them to stop or remind them to maintain discipline. Should such an action automatically be considered humiliation or mental stress? Or could it simply be an attempt to maintain a healthy learning environment and help students develop better habits?

This is an important question for all of us to consider.

Rights and responsibilities should go hand in hand. In any responsible society, individuals enjoy freedom, but they also understand that their actions should not affect the rights, learning and well-being of others. A classroom is a shared space where every student has the right to learn peacefully. Therefore, every student also has a responsibility to respect the learning environment.

Looking at education around the world, we can see that schools generally have clear expectations regarding behaviour, discipline and respect for others. When a student disturbs the teaching-learning process, there are usually appropriate ways of addressing the behaviour. Such measures are not necessarily intended to punish or embarrass a child; rather, they can help the child understand responsibility, develop self-discipline and become a better individual.

It is also important to remember that laws and their interpretation develop with time. As societies change, their understanding of rights, freedom, duties and responsibilities also evolves. A mature society therefore seeks a healthy balance between individual rights and collective responsibilities.

In this transition phase, the role of parents has become especially important. Parents can help children understand the difference between genuine humiliation and constructive correction. When a teacher corrects a child for disturbing a class, failing to complete homework or not following a reasonable instruction, parents can help the child reflect on the behaviour rather than immediately viewing every correction as unfair treatment.

There will naturally be challenges during a period of transition. What matters is how sensibly and responsibly we respond to them. Parents, teachers, schools and the wider community all have an important role to play in guiding children through this changing educational landscape.

A school is responsible for the education and development of hundreds of students. Its duty is not limited to academic learning alone. It also has a responsibility to help children develop discipline, confidence, respect, empathy and a sense of responsibility. Every child deserves the opportunity to grow to the best of their ability, while also learning to respect the rights and needs of others.

The nation, the education system, schools and parents ultimately share a common aspiration: to see young people grow into knowledgeable, responsible and capable citizens.

As parents and educators, perhaps the time has come to look beyond the language of rights alone. Rights are important, but they become more meaningful when accompanied by duties and responsibilities. Education should not merely prepare children to obtain certificates; it should prepare them to understand life, contribute to society and become responsible human beings.

When a teacher asks, "Why have you not completed your project or homework?" or says, "Do not make noise and disturb others," the intention should be understood in the context of teaching and learning. A teacher's responsibility is not only to complete a lesson but also to create an environment in which every child can learn.

Teachers work to earn a living, just as people in every profession do. But teaching carries an additional responsibility: teachers work with the lives, character and future of young people. Their guidance, correction and encouragement can leave a huge impact on a child.
As Nepal moves through this important transition in education, the way forward lies in balance—between rights and responsibilities, freedom and discipline, protection and accountability, and individual needs and the well-being of the community.

Education becomes truly meaningful when children know not only what they are entitled to receive, but also what they are expected to contribute. That balance can help us build a generation that is not only educated, but also thoughtful, respectful, responsible and ready to face the future.

The school organised inter-school competitions across three categories: Sanskrit Extempore, Shlokbachan, and Bhajangayan. A total of 23 schools participated in Shlokbachan, 18 in Bhajangayan, and 12 in Extempore.

Addressing the gathering, Chief Guest Prof. Dr. Lamichhane highlighted DAV as more than just a school, describing it as the university in its own right. He commended DAV School for being the first private school in Nepal to introduce Sanskrit education. He noted that the founder of DAV School, the late Shree Shankar Lal Kedia, Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia, Principal Dr. Bhubaneswari Rao, and the late Shree Janardan Ghimire contributed significantly to reviving and expanding Sanskrit education in both community and private schools across Nepal. He added that the advocacy of the late Janardan Ghimire, Shree Anil Kedia, and Principal Dr. Bhubaneswari Rao over the last decade was admirable—ranging from designing syllabi and organising workshops to taking these initiatives to major cities like Pokhara, Biratnagar, and Kathmandu. As a result, Sanskrit education has now reached almost every city in Nepal.

Reflecting nostalgically on the time he spent with Ghimire, he deeply appreciated Ghimire's dedication to Sanskrit. He remarked that the late Ghimire and DAV had accomplished feats that even a university might struggle to achieve, and he urged everyone to follow in their footsteps. Prof. Dr. Lamichhane emphasized that Sanskrit is not merely a language, but an embodiment of culture, science, and civilization itself.

In his address, Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia extended his gratitude to all attendees who made it to the event despite heart-breaking natural calamities and obstacles in Bagmati and Gandaki provinces . He noted that Janardan Guru was the heartbeat of the institution. He shared that his father had a profound wish to establish a school that could impart Sanskrit education, a vision shared by Janardan Guru. He remarked that it was divinely intended for his father and Janardan Guru to meet and establish a school dedicated to Sanskrit and Vedic education.

Highlighting the Sanskrit language, he described it as Dev Bhasa (the language of the gods) written in Dev Lipi. He emphasized that children who learn Sanskrit are equipped to protect their culture and religion, noting that culture thrives where there is devotion, worship, and gratitude toward all living and non-living beings. He also stressed the importance of spiritual education as the key distinction between humans and other living beings. He concluded his speech by congratulating all the winners, participants, and invited guests.

Mr. Ramchandra Khanal extended his heartfelt gratitude to all dignitaries and participants for honoring the late Janardan Ghimire. He stressed that Sanskrit is the mother of all languages and that mastering it builds a strong foundation for learning any other language. He highlighted the importance of language and knowledge in every profession and shared that DAV currently teaches eight languages, including Sanskrit, at the school level. Celebration of the 60th Birth Anniversary of Late Sushil Kedia

The much-awaited 60th birth anniversary of Late Sushil Kedia formally commenced with a Sangha Daan program at the school premises on October 4.

To mark the occasion, a total of 210 monks and nuns from 10 prominent Vihars were cordially invited to receive the Sangha Daan. The gathering was accompanied by a distinguished list of senior Bhantes, including prominent spiritual guide Bhante Nigrodha, Bhante Nandan, and Bhante Bodhigyan and Bhante Vimalo in the long list of Senior Bhantes and Anagarikas.

DAV Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia, the First Lady Shreemati Sunita Kedia, Director of DAV School Shree Ayush Kedia, alongside Mr. Ramchandra Khanal, CAO Ms. Vijaya Tater, faculty members, teachers, and staff, warmly welcomed all the invited Bhantes and Anagarikas. Addressing the auspicious occasion, Shree Anil Kedia noted that special emphasis is placed on the 60th birth anniversary in our culture. He shared fond childhood memories of his brother, Late Sushil Kedia, becoming nostalgic about his simple lifestyle, caring nature, and divine words, which were cherished by everyone he met throughout his life. He highlighted that DAV is a memorial school established in his brother's memory—a school built on the foundation of culture with the sole aim of imparting moral and ethical education in line with the character and values his brother demonstrated. He also emphasized that DAV considers this program the most important of all.

Furthermore, he expressed sincere gratitude to the monks and nuns from various Vihars across the Kathmandu Valley for providing the opportunity to offer Sangha Daan. Stressing the rare gift of human birth, he noted that coming into contact with religion, developing faith, and following a spiritual path are rare privileges. Likewise, he highlighted that religion is protected through the Sangha, and that the Bhantes have safeguarded these teachings while providing humanity with the opportunity to practice Sangha Daan and other religious and spiritual activities.

The session proceeded with a sermon by Bhante Vimalo at the request of the Chairperson. Before sharing teachings and moral stories from Lord Gautama Buddha, he offered prayers for the Punyaprapti of Late Sushil Kedia and his parents- Late Shree Shankar Lal Kedia and Late Shreemati Indumati Kedia, wishing successful heavenly journey. He commended DAV School for inculcating values in children through Pariyatti Sikshya, as well as Vipassana and meditation classes for students, teachers, and the wider community. He underscored that DAV's effort to foster an education that prepares children not just for academic degrees, but to become moral and ethical human beings, is truly laudable.

According to Bhante Vimalo, the annual practice of Sangha Daan at DAV fulfills a fundamental religious duty. He shared stories illustrating the fulfillment of duty through religion, engaging all attendees in the teachings of Lord Gautama Buddha. Following the address, Shree Anil Kedia lit the ceremonial lamp in memory of Late Sushil Kedia, and Shree Nigrodha Bhante led the Paritran recitation, followed by Asta Pariskar Daan and Punyanumodan.

Toward the conclusion of the program, Bhante Nigrodha shared that it was an immense pleasure to welcome Bhikshu Pannakara—popularly known for his "Walk for Peace" campaign in the United States—alongside the team from the Aalok Foundation and academicians from Lumbini Buddhist University to DAV for academic research and discourse on October 9. Leading Bhantes of the Kathmandu Valley, in co-ordination with DAV Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia, had spearheaded this initiative during Bhikshu Pannakara's visit to Nepal to support victims of the Bhote Koshi floods.

Floral Homage and Prashad Distribution Ceremony

Teachers, non-teaching staff, and students participated in a floral homage and Prashad distribution ceremony on the occasion of 60th Birth Anniversary of Late Sushil Kedia.

The ceremony began with a recitation of the Havan mantra, led by Mr. Purushottam Rijal, Head of the Sanskrit Department. Chairperson Shree Anil Kedia, the First Lady Shreemati Sunita Kedia, Director of DAV School Shree Ayush Kedia, Mr. Ramchandra Khanal, CAO Ms. Vijaya Tater, SSO, Wing Co-ordinators, Human Resource Manager and HoDs attended the prayers on 4th October, 2026. In the same trait, teachers and students from all the wings paid their respects to the late Sushil Kedia with floral tributes on 7th and 8th October.

DAV is a memorial school founded by the late Shree Shankar Lal Kedia and the late Shreemati Indumati Kedia in memory of their beloved son, Shree Sushil Kedia, who passed away at the young age of 19. He is the brother of the Chairperson, Shree Anil Kedia.

2-Day Late Sushil Kedia Memorial Havan

A two-day Sushil Kedia Memorial Havan was solemnized at Indu Sadan and Shankar Sadan on 7th and 8th October, 2026, marking the auspicious occasion of the 60th Birth Anniversary of late Sushil Kedia.

The event commenced with an insightful address by Mr. Ramchandra Khanal, who enlightened students on the sacred rituals and cultural significance of the havan, emphasizing the ideals of Swami Dayananda Saraswati.

Conducted in accordance with Vedic tradition and Arya Samaj standards, the ceremony was led by Mr. Purushottam Rijal, Head of the Sanskrit Department, who chanted sacred mantras from the Rigveda and guided attendees through the rituals. The devotional atmosphere was further enriched by soulful hymns performed by students of the Music Department. The ceremony concluded with the distribution of tika and prasad. Swami Dayananda Saraswati—founder of the global DAV movement—played a pivotal role in globalizing havan culture. Continuing this rich legacy, DAV regularly conducts various sacred ceremonies throughout the academic year, including the Vidya Subharambha Havan at the beginning of the academic session, the Sushil Kedia Memorial Havan, and the Good Luck Havan for Grade X students prior to their board examinations, alongside special occasion observances.

Additionally, the havan held in Pratik Hall at Shankar Sadan paid special homage to the late Pratik Sumsher Jung Bahadur Rana, a former DAV student after whom the hall is named. His mother continues to attend the annual ceremony to offer prayers for the peaceful repose of her son's soul.

Delivering the welcome speech, Middle School Co-ordinator Mr. Krishna Joshi highlighted the event as the brainchild of Principal Dr. Bhubaneswari Rao, designed with 100% student participation around this session's theme of Grade VI: "LEAD". He emphasized that the Jamboree enhances holistic growth, boosts self-esteem, connects students to heritage, and aims to nurture humble, modest, and respectful individuals.

The cultural lineup featured a variety of performances, including a skit, Kathak and Bharatnatyam classical dances, Bollywood dance, a thematic dance, an English song, an international dance, and a lively Nepali dance. A special "Parents Item" was also featured as part of the celebration. Addressing the gathering, Chief Guest Mr. Prahlad Kumar Regmi called for regenerating family values as a key solution to ongoing problems of youths and children. He urged parents to instill cultural principles like Matridevo Bhava and Pitridevo Bhava (revering mothers and fathers as divine), alongside gratitude toward nature and Istadev.

"Highly appreciated. An excellent performance! I hope the students will continue to develop leadership skills in the coming days while understanding the core theme of both the school and society."
